ASHWIN SINGH

Keep Your Beat!

Ashwin's interest in playing multiple instruments like drums, guitars and keys has always allowed him to be enthusiastic and forever engaging in the music field. He is basically a self taught drummer who can play the guitar and keys as well. Apart from the performance aspect, Ashwin is also a composer and a music producer. Ashwin has an ear for rock, progressive rock and metal genre and he tries to incorporate that vibe into his music. He started his musical journey in his school days where his teacher in the school recognized his passion towards learning instruments and led him on the path to explore the musical world from a practical aspect. Later in his high school he formed a band with his school mates which was called "The Last Apology" formed in the city of Jammu and Kashmir. The last apology was a major step in his career as they explored various stages together and performed for the crowd of various folks in North India. Ashwin then joined another band called the "Lost Syndicate" as a drummer in Mumbai in 2017 which was a progressive rock band and he experimented on new songs with the band. Ashwin has been influenced by metal legends "Lamb of God" to Guitar god "Stevie ray Vaughan". Ashwin is an electronics and telecommunications engineer and is doing his diploma in Music Production technology from Global music Institute and is now pursuing his career in music production while completing his diploma. Ashwin goes by the name “strumsandgrooves” and is always curious in exploring new performance techniques and production techniques to create new music everyday. Ashwin has released two songs with “The Last Apology” and one song with “Lost Syndicate” and has produced an anthem for his college while doing his BTech. He is currently working on his own solo projects as a music composer and a producer.
